Mike, a newer and overworked corporate lawyer, meets up with his old friend Brett to watch a band play at a bar. Brett introduces Mike to some of his friends, one of whom is Connie, a small petite woman with a punk emo appearance who also happens to be very cute.

Connie is intrigued to learn that Mike used to be a musician and also used to play in a band with Brett. It's hard for her to imagine that this lawyer guy in a suit can get down and party, and Mike's apparent juxtaposition intrigues Connie and makes her want to get to know him more.

The night eventually finds the group back at Connie's apartment for a house party, and after it dwindles down, Mike eventually finds himself alone with Connie. Connie then eggs him on to play her some of the old music that he and Brett recorded together... in her room.

Why did Connie invite Mike into her room? Was it really just the music? And Mike -- the man who's been so busy working that his romantic life is currently non-existent -- can he possibly resist this cute petite punk woman's tight body?
